Excerpt: . him in 1764, 1765 and 1773, he was appointed December 1, 1777, to revise the Acts of Assembly, and was to lay a fair copy of the whole compilement before the next session of Assembly, and four days later he was allowed 500 for the work. Again on May 12, 1783, a bill was brought in to authorize him to revise, print and publish all the laws now in force and use. This bill was in answer to an offer from him, but like the proposal of 1777 came to naught. (See chap. 46, laws 1783, and chap. 4, laws of 1787.) To Davis also belongs the honor of establishing the first newspaper in the colony. This was the North Carolina Gazette, with the freshest advices, foreign and domestic. Number one probably appeared in the spring of 1755, as No. 103 is...
