Government Accountability Office, 2006 OCLC Number: (OCLOC)77072118 Subject: Corporations -- Taxation -- United States. Excerpt: . . . An alternative definition of competitiveness that is also sometimes used in tax policy debates refers to the ability of U. S. -owned firms operating abroad to compete in foreign markets. The current U. S. policy of taxing the worldwide income of U. S. businesses places some of their foreign operations at a disadvantage. The tradeoffs between a worldwide system and a territorial tax system are discussed below. Tax compliance requirements for businesses are extensive and complex. Businesses Bear Rules governing the computation of taxable income, expense deductions, Significant Compliance and tax credits of U. S. corporations that do business in multiple foreign Burdens Arising Both from countries are particularly complex. But even small businesses face the Complexity of the Tax multiple levels of tax requirements of varying difficulty. In addition to System and from Their computing and documenting their income, expenses, and qualifications for Multiple Roles within the various tax credits, businesses with employees are responsible for System collecting and remitting (at varying intervals) several federal taxes on the incomes of those employees. Moreover, if the businesses choose to offer their employees retirement plans and other fringe benefits, they can substantially increase the number of filings they must make. Businesses also have information-reporting responsibilities - employers send wage statements to their employees and to IRS; banks and other financial 14 intermediaries send investment income statements to clients and to IRS. Finally, a relatively small percentage of all businesses (which nevertheless number in the hundreds of thousands) are required to participate in the collection of various federal...
