Excerpt: .Do not promise a man we will not draw; we will draw. When a firm sells out they must have something to pay with, often, in fact usually, they sell because they are getting behind. Get a mortgage on the land, indorsement of notes, or assignment of accounts; get something sure; take no promises. These suggestions are few, simple and vital, and we trust you may appreciate the fact that a salesman s value is guaged as much by the losses he avoids by exercising this care, as by the amount of goods he be of more value to on if on would show the Y Y public wherein your machines are superior to our Cashier---- The only trouble we have, is in thanking our patrons for their conspicuous approval of our machine--and the trouble they take to send us their unqualified disapoval of...
