Not illustrated. 1921 Excerpt: .other metal products for a four-year course of apprenticeship, the first year of which is all school work and the next three years of which are spent by alternating one week in the school and one week in the shop. The apprentices work in pairs, so that if a.shop has eight apprentices, four will be working at all times and four will be attending school. During the summer months, the whole time is spent in the shops. The high-school course covers English, mathematics, machine shop practice, free-hand drawing, mechanical drawing, industrial history, factory systems, physics and chemistry, and commercial geography. This plan is based on that developed by the University of Cincinnati, where the students taking engineering courses at the university work, during a period of six years, alternate weeks in the shops and in the university. CHAPTER VI RECORDING THE PROGRESS OF APPRENTICES One of the weak points in many apprentice systems in the past has been the lack of a definite method of obtaining information about boys who have been accepted for the apprentice courses and of recording their progress during their apprentice term. The present chapter outlines the plan followed by the Westinghouse Electric Mfg. Co., East Pittsburg, Pa., in conducting the apprentice courses in the plant so that there is an assurance that the right kind of boy is accepted for trade training, and in permanently recording the proficiency and progress of the apprentice as shown in both class and shop work....
