Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Montclair: The Preservation of Its Natural Beauty and Its Improvement as a Residence Town At the Montclair Dinner of March 14th, 1908, held under the auspices of the Civic Association, it was stated: That, although Montclair is generally considered the most attractive of all New York suburbs, it is not nearly as attractive as it would have been if wise plans for the Town's development had been made thirty years ago and consistently followed to this time. That, aside from natural beauty, the attractiveness of Montclair is due to the individual efforts of private citizens in making their individual homes, and but very little to any organized efforts to make the whole town attractive; That, the town has numerous unsatisfactory features inconsistent with its reputation and with the aspirations of its citizens, and lacks attractive features that a town like Montclair ought to have, and can have; That, if we desire the Montclair of the future to retain the characteristic charm of the country town, rather than to become merely the commonplace small city in the country, we must very soon supersede the present haphazard method of development, in which the attractiveness of the town depends almost wholly on private initiative, with a scientific Town Plan, authoritatively applied and consistently adhered to. It was suggested that a Commission of representative citizens would perform a valuable service to the Town by studying its needs and opportunities, by devising plans for preserving its natural beauty and for assuring its future development along the best lines. A motion was offered, and unanimously carried, requesting the Civic Association to appoint such a Commission and to define its duties....
